Department Description

Research Human Resources Consultant- Temporary Full-Time

Lawson Health Research Institute (Lawson) is the research institute of London Health Sciences Centre and St. Joseph's Health Care London. As one of Canada's top ten research institutes, we are committed to furthering scientific knowledge to advance health care around the world.

Reporting to the Manager, Research Human Resources, the Research Human Resources Consultant at Lawson will provide employee relations advice to research leaders, research staff as well as work and liaise with Human Resources representatives from London Health Sciences Centre and St. Joseph's Health Care, London. The Research Human Resources Consultant is also responsible for coaching, scheduling and conducting attendance management meetings, interpretation of policies and/or procedures, and providing guidance to research staff, specifically related to Employment law. The Research Human Resources Consultant serves as the central point of contact for research leaders and staff for all Human Resources needs, providing internal consulting services and advice on human resource issues. While this is a role that provides the opportunity to work independently, a team approach is required to tackle city wide challenges and collaboration is key. The Research HR Consultant will work closely with the Manager, Research HR, research stakeholders, hospital, and Western University's HR departments. Furthermore, the incumbent will support and provide backup to Research HR Associates in the areas of recruitment, disability management, payroll, and other general HR functions.

Rate of Pay: To commensurate with experience

Hours of Work: 37.5 hours per week

Duration: 18 month contract
